

CAVERLY ESTABLISHES PRECEDENT AND ALLOWS DEFENSE TO PROVE SLAYERS "MENTAL STATE"

AGREEMENT NEAR ON DAWES' SCHEME LEADERS DECLARE

Inter-Allied Experts to Reach Settlement By Saturday Night?

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Paris, Aug. 1.—An inter-allied agreement at the London conference will be reached not later than tomorrow, according to French foreign office spokesmen just returned from England. They consider the only danger point is the question of the Germans' attitude when they are finally brought into the conference. It would be to Germany's interest, they maintain, to show herself as conciliatory. Therefore they are hoping for the best.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
London, Aug. 1.—The experts of the inter-allied conference indicated early this afternoon that they expected to settle all the outstanding problems of the conference up to them for solution before the afternoon was over.

The experts, who did not leave Downing Street until 2:15 o'clock this morning, returned to their task at 11 o'clock and during a two-hour session adopted the French proposals for the modification of the Dawes plan. They then adjourned to re-assemble later in the afternoon.

Troublesome Problem
The problem of transfers allotted to the transfer commission under the Dawes plan is still causing trouble. If the experts are unable to overcome the difficulty on this point this afternoon the issue will be referred to the chief delegates.

Owen D. Young, of the Dawes committee, who has maintained an attitude of restrained hopefulness ever since Premier Herriot's plan was produced, was announced when he left the foreign office. "We will finish up this afternoon," he said.

If the experts conclude their work this afternoon their reports will be submitted to a plenary session of the conference tomorrow.

The Americans believe the invitation to Germany will be dispatched tonight.

Hughes Meets Former Heads of France at Big Dinner

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Paris, Aug. 1.—Before leaving for Brussels, Secretary Hughes had long talks not only with President Doumergue, but with former President Millerand and Poincaré, with the former at his home and with the latter after dinner at the American embassy. It is no secret of state says Le Matin, to record that the American cabinet chief was deeply interested in the conversations of the two former presidents.

"It has been a long time," the paper continues, "since Mr. Hughes was in Europe and he has followed the situation here from afar, sometimes perhaps seeing it through the distorting prism formed by the immense ocean."

"In a word," concludes the paper, "Mr. Hughes left in a very different state of mind from what he had when he arrived."

Ladies' G. A. R. Give City Flag for Its Arch

The Ladies of the G. A. R., through Mrs. Margaret Cline, and Mrs. Mac Cupp, today presented the city with a beautiful American flag to be placed on the arch. A flag has always been displayed on the arch, since it was erected a few years ago. But since the arch was rebuilt and decorated, a few months ago, there has not been a flag displayed. This is the second flag the Ladies' G. A. R. have furnished, and they should be commended for the fine spirit they have displayed and for the interest they have shown in community enterprises.

Tri-County Druggists Picnic Here Next Week

The annual outing and picnic of the members of the Tri-County Druggists association and their families will be held at Lowell park on Thursday afternoon and evening of next week. The customary elaborate program of sports and athletics has been arranged a long list of valuable prizes will be awarded the winners of the various contests. A feature of the day will be a barbecue supper to be served at 6 o'clock.

Austrian Baroness Sent to Prison for Stealing

Graz, Austria.—Baroness Alice Konrad Von Konradgheim was sentenced to six months in jail today after conviction on a charge of stealing and selling pearls belonging to two of her friends in the former Austrian aristocracy.

Not Enough Traffic on Sterling Streets to Keep Grass Down

A barrel of weed killer has been ordered by the city. As soon as this arrives it will be used on a number of brick paved streets where the grass and weeds have grown up between the bricks. In some blocks about the city the pavement is almost entirely covered with grass and weeds.—Sterling Gazette.

INMATE ADMITS MURDER WIDOW AT MICH. HOME

Wanted to "Get Even"
with Her for Past Disagreement.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
LaPeere, Mich., Aug. 1.—Louis Johnson, 21, an inmate of the Michigan Home and Training School, a state institution for the feeble-minded, is in jail after having confessed here yesterday, police say, that he strangled to death Mrs. Blanche Burke, 28, employee at the institution.

Johnson readily admitted killing the woman, according to officers and then went to the scene and re-enacted the occurrences for them. He told them, they said, that he resolved to kill the woman to "get even" with her for an argument they had had in the laundry of the institution some time before.

On the night of Saturday, July 26, the alleged confession continued, the man waited for Mrs. Burke to leave the home and followed her until they reached a lonely spot. He caught her and overpowered her.

Stripping off her stockings Johnson bound her feet together and then tied her hands before he strangled her, police say he said.

Mrs. Burke was the mother of two small children. Her husband died three years ago.

Investigation of Radio Concerns Decided Upon

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Aug. 1.—Recent findings of the federal trade commission alleging that a monopoly exists among certain radio companies have led the "Sherman Law section" of the department of justice to determine upon "a further investigation for additional facts."

Whether Attorney General Stone has decided to bring anti-trust law action against these or other radio equipment manufacturers and distributors has not been made known, but officials of the department are understood to be of the opinion that some companies are involved in an agreement affecting selling prices.

Decapitated Body of Man Found in Chicago Suburb

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Aug. 1.—The decapitated body of a man found in a strip of woods near Brookfield, a western suburb who was slain by robbers, the police believe, has been identified as that of George Dinos of South Chicago, supposed to have been a sailor. A card indicating he had been employed by the Lake Carriers Association was found in the clothing.

Authorities found several revolver cartridges near the body and believe he was shot and then decapitated.

Iowa: Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; possibly local thunderstorms; warmer tonight.

LONG SEARCH FOR RUNAWAY WIFE ENDS IN MORGUE

Rockford Woman, Mother of 8, Killed in Accident at Milwaukee.

Grim tragedy ended the two-year search of George Oscar Bennett, age 35, for his runaway wife—mother of eight little children—when he found her lying dead in a Milwaukee morgue, the victim of an automobile accident.

Bennett collapsed when the covering was drawn back from the body and he recognized his wife's features. She had been run down and killed by an automobile in Milwaukee just as her husband's search was nearing success.

One night two years ago Mrs. Bennett quietly left her husband and eight little children in their home here and disappeared. Bennett found his search for his wife futile and finally placed seven of the youngsters in an orphan's home in Dubuque, leaving one child, Leona, a crippled daughter, in the Children's Home at Rockford.

Read of Accident
Tuesday night a "Mrs. Blanche Jones was instantly killed by an automobile while she was crossing a street in Milwaukee. Bennett, who had gone to that city on a "tip" that his wife was there, read of the accident but did not associate it with his wife's name.

Police who inquired at the dead woman's residence in Milwaukee found that "John Jones" with whom she was living, had hurriedly disappeared after the accident.

Finally a description of the automobile victim led Bennett to the morgue. After he had regained his composure, following the shock of learning that the dead woman was his wife, he assured the coroner that he would provide for her burial. Her parents at Bloom, Wis., he said, would aid him.

Revision of Sugar Tariff Subject of Two Reports of Tariff Commission's Work

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Aug. 1.—The question of revising the sugar tariff schedules has been put up to President Coolidge after more than a year and a half of investigation and dispute by the tariff commission.

The commission's findings, completion of which Senator La Follette, independent candidate for president, recently charged, was being opposed by representatives of the "sugar interests," were submitted yesterday to the president who alone is empowered under the law to proclaim revision of the rates up or down to the extent of 50 percent.

The results of the inquiry were not announced although it had been indicated that majority and minority reports were contemplated by the commissioners.

The investigation was started at the direction of President Harding in March, 1923, and has been marked by a long and bitter struggle within the commission and between interests having opposing views on the rates.

Burdick's Case Will be Heard Next Wednesday

Sheriff Elliott C. Risley returned home yesterday afternoon from Chicago with H. L. Burdick and the Marmon touring car. Burdick retained Sherwood Dixon to represent him and when the case was called before Justice J. O. Shaulis, a change of venue was taken to the court of Justice Albert H. Hanneken. The case was continued until Wednesday afternoon of next week, the bond being fixed in the sum of $750, which were furnished by John Duffy.

The airplane which had been in use at the aviation field east of the city, according to Sheriff Risley, was found to be in a bad condition of repair after nose diving into the ground near Elmhurst Sunday morning. The plane is being held under the mortgage which the sheriff foreclosed and may be torn down, loaded on a truck and brought to Dixon.

Russian Bureau Plans to Sue American Ins. Firms

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Moscow.—Claims amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars will soon be made on a number of large American insurance companies by a Soviet bureau acting on behalf of Russian policy holders who have failed to collect insurance, owing to the withdrawal of the companies from Russia.

Murder a Day in Chicago During Past Two Months

Chicago, Aug. 1.—A murder a day was committed in Chicago in June and July, according to a report of the Chicago Crime Commission.

DEFENSE PLANS OF WAR DEPT. MADE PUBLIC

Return to Revolutionary Methods of Mobilization, Scheme.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Boston, Mass., Aug. 1.—War department plans for national defense made public today by Major General A. W. Brewster, commanding the First Corps Area, provide for a return to revolutionary methods of mobilization.

Instead of troops being sent to a central cantonment, they will be gathered locally, trained near their homes, and replacements will come from fellow citizens.

"Never again will men be herded into huge cantonments," General Brewster said. "Instead, men will collect themselves together naturally much as our forefathers did in the American revolution, and each town and state will be largely responsible for its own troops."

General Brewster's statement, making public "certain features of the war department's plans for national defense which have heretofore been classified as secret," repeated the plans to call out troops of the regular army and the national guard first in the event of an emergency, adding that "as these troops had mobilized, expanded to was strength and left their areas, the organized reserves would commence their mobilization, using the shelter and other facilities in their communities used previously by preceding troops."

Davis "Agin" Defense Day But Favors "Preparation"

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, Aug. 1.—His calendar clear of engagements, John W. Davis was able to devote his time today to the perfection of his address accepting the democratic presidential nomination.

The program called for further discussion with his campaign manager, C. L. Shaver. One of the problems of organization—the selection of a national treasurer and a finance committee, remains to be disposed of, but the nominee and his field general hope to have this out of the way before the official notification ceremonies at Clarksburg, ten days hence.

Amplifying the formal statement issued after his return from Maine yesterday in which he endorsed the position of his running mate, Governor Bryan of Nebraska, regarding the administration's plan for national defense, Davis said last night that he believed in "military preparation."

He declared opposition to the encouragement of "demonstrations" at a time when every effort should be made to get the world back to peace and to work.

Young Friends Opposed to National Defense Day

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Richmond, Ind., Aug. 1.—A nationwide campaign under the direction of a group of Young Friends, against observance of National Defense day, was in progress today, according to an announcement by J. Howard Marshall and Miss Rachel Conrad Jones of Philadelphia, chairman of the committee in charge of the movement.

Letters and literature protesting against observance of the day on the ground that it constitutes an endorsement of future wars is being mailed out to groups of Young Friends throughout the nation, according to the chairman who are attending the Young Friends conference here.

Will Not Broadcast Any Opera from Chicago Now

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Aug. 1.—Broadcasting of opera in Chicago will be discontinued this season, it was learned today. The increasing number of radio stations is understood to be one of the reasons for discontinuing this popular feature of the air.

Sunday Shows at Walnut Issue at Special Poll

The Walnut Electric theater has petitioned the council of the town to permit the opening of the moving picture theater on Sundays. The proposition will be submitted to the voters at a special election on Aug. 5th. A bond issue for a new city water tank will also be voted upon at that time.

Usual Weekly Concert by Band Tomorrow Eve

The Y Boys' Band will give their regular weekly concert on the Court House lawn tomorrow evening from 6:30 to 7:30. The band has been playing concerts regularly in Dixon and in neighboring towns all summer and from the way they have been practicing, this concert promises to be one of the best.

OREGON TEACHER ROUTED ROBBER IN HARD FIGHT

Miss Ruth Stroud Was Felled By Bandit in Her Home.

Oregon, Ill.—Miss Ruth Stroud, 19, was recovering today from injuries sustained in a battle with a robber, whom she discovered in her home, at the south end of town, Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Stroud on returning from an errand, discovered a man ransacking the buffet in the dining room of the home. When she endeavored to cry out, the thief grabbed her by the throat. The girl fought bravely until the robber grasped a nearby vase and struck her a violent blow on the forehead.

Stunned and bleeding, the girl released her hold on the robber's coat and he escaped.

Robber Escapes.

A few minutes later, Miss Stroud summoned neighbors who called the police, but no trace of the man was discovered. The Stroud home is near the railroad yards and it is believed the robber boarded a passing freight train and left town.

He is described as being short in stature, and was wearing a blue shirt and the apparel of a laborer.

Miss Stroud is a member of the faculty in the Oregon schools. She was home alone at the time of the robbery, her parents having left for a two weeks vacation.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS HAVE HONORED ORT

Flag Pole to Be Dedicated on Anniversary
Armistice Day.

Horace Ort post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, have erected on the Newman lot in Oakwood cemetery, a very fitting memorial to Lee county's first soldier whose life paid the supreme penalty on the battlefields of France. The memorial is in the form of a 60 foot flag pole purchased and placed on the lot by the members of the post which was named after the first was hero from this county.

A program, which the public will be invited to attend, will mark the dedication of the memorial on Nov. 11, Armistice day at 11 o'clock in the morning. The date and hour is most fitting for the dedication of the memorial to Lee county's first hero, it being the anniversary of the time that the armistice was signed in 1918. The committee in charge of the dedication program plan to be forgotten and it is quite probable that the school children of the city will attend the ceremony in a body as well as other patriotic organizations.

Installing Plate Glass in New Office Building

A force of men from the National Mirror works at Rockford are in the city today installing the front in the new Dixon Loan & Building Association and Dixon Water Company office building. The upper sash of the front is of coppered plate glass with heavy plate glass forming the windows. Work on the new office building is proceeding rapidly and next week another force of men will start work on laying the new decorative tile floors.

Dixon and Rockford Golfers in Tie Game

A large delegation of golfers from the Rockford Country club motored to Dixon yesterday afternoon and spent a most enjoyable day at the Dixon Country club. In a friendly match, both teams tied, the score being 25 apiece. In the evening the visitors were guests at a luncheon and smoker.

Two Ran Afoul Dixon's Traffic Laws: Pay Fines

Harold Kanzier was arrested yesterday for driving his car with the muffler open, for which offense he was fined $3 and costs by Justice A. H. Hanneken in police court. E. S. Lehman who failed to keep to the right of the traffic lights also paid a fine of $3 and costs.

Detroit Woman, 69, Will Marry Youth Who's But 23

Detroit, Aug. 1.—Mary A. Mayginn, 69, was married here yesterday to Edward H. Cochran, 23. The 45 years difference in ages, according to Bert Malone, marriage license clerk, is a record for Detroit.

BRUTAL AND UNWARRANTED SLAYING OF FRANKS BOY "INTELLECTUAL FEAT" IS TESTIMONY OF ALIENIST CAVERLY LETS IN

States Attorney Crowe Lost Every Effort to Block Testimony of Alienists
in Hearing of Two Murderers

Chicago, Aug. 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—Nathan Leopold, Jr., co-defendant with Richard Loeb, for the murder of Robert Franks, looked forward to the present proceedings as "a kindly, interesting, intellectual experience of life," said Dr. William A. White, defense alienist, today. Dr. White added that Leopold had expressed regret that "unfortunately he finds it stupid and boring."

Leopold also enjoyed looking forward to himself objectively as a murderer, Dr. White said, but again was disappointed in the result, as he told the witness it made no actual change in his life.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—The kidnapping and murder of Robert Franks was planned as "an intellectual feat Franks was planned as 'an intellectual feat to testimony given today in the hearing which is to decide punishment for him and Nathan Leopold, Jr., for that crime."

This revelation of Loeb's motive came at the end of the morning session today from Dr. William A. White, first witness for the defense, whose testimony was started after Judge Caverly had definitely overruled objections by the state directed against all evidence as to the mentality of the defendants.

This ruling disposed of a question which had been argued for two days and which attorneys agreed constituted a precedent in Illinois for receiving evidence in mitigation of punishment.

"DICKIE" IS THE BOY.

Dr. White's testimony transformed the companion of Leopold from "Richard Loeb, defendant in this case" to "Dickie," a child beset with phantasmic dreams of becoming either the world's greatest detective or a "master mind" dominating organized enemies of society.

The witness called him "Dickie" and Judge Caverly, in ruling on the admissibility of evidence, about the "foolish goodness" who drove the boy to death, used the diminutive twice himself.

There were six points which Loeb told Dr. White were objectives in the crime, the witness said.

"They were," said Dr. White, "first, the joy in planning, second the thrill of contemplation, third, the anticipation of getting $100,000; fourth, the publicity; fifth, his own discussion of the crime with others, and last and least, the money itself."

Loeb also told Dr. White he believed he had gotten all out of life that he contained.

The prospect of more vocal pyrotechnics, with perhaps a momentary legal ruling by Judge Caverly, at that conclusion, proved a magnet for court fans. The prolongation of the proceedings had only served to increase the interest of the curiosity seekers and this morning the line of would-be spectators formed on the floor below the court room hours before the doors were opened. A few minutes after that event the court fallouts sent word down stairs:

"That's all," and those who had arrived later than 8:30 a. m., were out of luck.

"We have made an analysis of all the cases cited by the state," said Mr. Bachrach, "and except in one or two inconsequential instances, none of them related to instances in which mental disease was offered as mitigation of punishment. All were inapplicable to this case."

Questions Crowe's Function.
"As this argument has progressed I have wondered what function there was in the office of State's Attorney that allowed him to fix the punishment of these defendants."

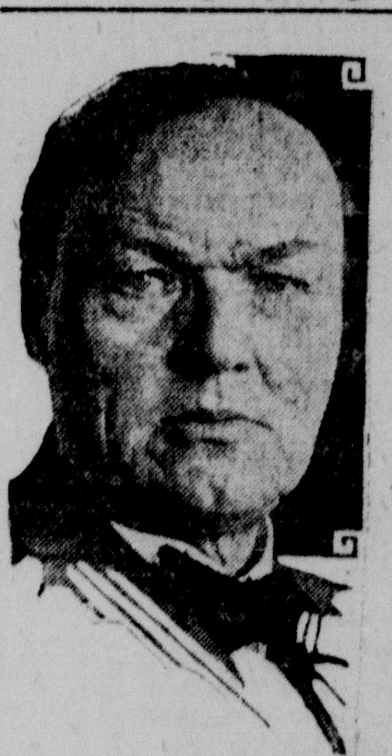

"What right has he as an officer of the law to demand what form of punishment should be meted out?" "It is, in fact, none of his business. Whether a defendant pleads guilty or is convicted by a jury, his function is to inform the court by laying before it all facts in the case."

"That is his real duty, whether the facts are favorable or unfavorable to the defendants."

"But, raising an apothecary's scale he now asks your honor to let him weigh the rights of these boys, something which is solely within the functioning of the court itself."

"Were I in his place I would, instead let my conscience be my guide and were I a judge I would want to know every fact that could be presented from either viewpoint for both state and defense I would weigh the ponderable as well as the imponderable."

"Rules Don't Matter."

"I would lay aside the rules of evidence," continued Mr. Bachrach. "They don't matter in a situation like this. They don't matter as a fact of law."

"This is not a trial. It is a hearing for you to determine the punishment to be meted out."

He quote affirm "Fisher on Evidence" to the effect that formalities necessary when a case is before a jury should be disregarded by a court in considering punishment.

"Everything went in that the state desired and properly so. When it comes to the defense's evidence nothing should be shut out. It requires a distortion of the mind to say that evidence as to the mental condition of these boys is not a proper consideration in fixing the punishment."

Crowe Answered Darrow.
Mr. Crowe followed, saying the issue before the court was something for Judge Caverly himself to define.

"I was in doubt, as I listened to Mr. Darrow, whether he realized he was in a court room and not arguing before a legislature," said Mr. Crowe.

"And Mr. Bachrach," continued the prosecutor, "would bar the state's attorney from the court room and make of this, not a trial, but an experiment."

"The defense would have us say these boys who have entered day after day at the representatives of the law, have not blood on their hands but jam."

Mr. Crowe said the defense had pictured Leopold and Loeb not as "intellectuals who in their self-imposed superiority have rejected God" but as "innocent babes who still believe in Santa Claus."

Defended His Acts.

"Mr. Darrow has charged me because I sentenced a self-confessed criminal to death when I was on the bench," said Mr. Crowe. "But I was following the law."

Mr. Crowe also defended his course in backing a bill in the last Illinois legislature for revision of the lunacy laws.

"If that bill had gone through and I had brought these defendants into court as insane," he said, "Mr. Darrow would have represented them here as intellectual giants from the University of Chicago."

"This is a tremendous case in Illinois," Mr. Crowe said in opening his remarks.

"We are roaming around in dream land. The state's attorney is entitled, at sea as to what is going on here. These men are men of intellect, graduates of universities and should be held to strict accountability for their acts. They did not commit a murder. They broke a jar of jam! That is no blood on their hands! That's jam! If your honor, please, they are not the cold blooded murderers, above the law because of their wealth! They are not the cold blooded murderers that have sat here day after day and smiled and smirked as the evidence of their heinous crime went in! They are not self-sufficient athletes who have rejected God! No, they still believe in Santa Claus! We should not discuss a cold blooded murder in the presence! I insist, your honor, follow the rules of logic in the matter of hearing this evidence."

Judge Caverly looked inquiringly at the attorneys for both sides and finding none wished to argue further, delivered his decision in a few short sentences.

Defense Rejoiced.
Loeb and Leopold, with broad smiles on their countenances, leaned over to Benjamin Bachrach and spoke in a low tone.

Jacob and Allan Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Sr., and Foreman Leopold nodded and smiled their approval and Mr. Darrow leaned towards the state's attorney, chuckling.

Dr. William A. White, first defense witness, climbed back to the stand.

"Will you state your professional connections both present and past," said Walter Bachrach.

"In 1903 I was appointed superintendent of the government hospital for the insane at Washington," Dr. White answered. "I am the alienist for the Public Health Service."

He explained the work of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, saying what persons were taken there and that during the World War, the mental disease patients became so numerous that none but army men were admitted.

"As a result of your experience have

Today's Market Report

Barish Selling Drove

Wheat Prices Down Today

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, Aug. 1.—General selling, largely to barish private estate, of the 1924 domestic wheat crop, did a good deal to make the wheat market average lower in price today. Increased hedging sales of newly harvested wheat counted also as a bearish factor. On the declines however, buying enlarged and brought about rallies. The opening price, from 1/2c off to 3/4c up, with Sept. 1.32 1/2@1.33 and Dec. 1.35 1/2, were followed by a decline of nearly 2c in some cases and then by a recovery to within a fraction of yesterday's finish.

Persistent buying on the part of a leading trader gave strength to corn. After opening unchanged to 1/2c higher, Dec. 97 1/2@, prices sagged a little and then scored material gains, especially the September delivery. Oats were easy, sympathizing with wheat weakness. Starting at 1/2c lower to 1/4c higher, Sept. 48 1/2, the market underwent a moderate general setback.

Provisions were firm. Sept. corn reached a new high price record for the season. Smallness of receipts here were a bullish factor. The close was firm 1 1/2 to 4 1/2c net higher, Dec. 99 1/2.

Subsequently, foreigners and wheat houses were active buyers of wheat on breaks in price, and resumption of black rust reports from both north and south of the Canadian boundary together with corn strength here led to sharp rallies. Aggressive selling on bulks ensued. The close was heavy 1 1/2 to 2 1/2c net lower, Sept. 1.80@1.81 and Dec. 1.84@1.85.

COOLIDGE REPLIES TO BRYAN REGARDING DEFENSE DAY

And Governor of Nebraska Makes Telegrams Public Regarding Issues.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 1.—Defense Day plans do not call for any disruption of business in any way, President Coolidge told Governor C. W. Bryan, democratic vice presidential nominee, in replying to a request from the governor for advice as to the scope of the war department's plans.

Quoting General G. B. Duncan, commander of the seventh army corps area of Omaha, as saying the event should "not only be a test of the mobilization plans of the organized forces of the army, but also a demonstration of the mobilization of all the elements of the nation—both personnel and material," the governor's telegram called attention to Mr. Coolidge's recent statement to F. J. Libby, secretary of the national council for prevention of war that the event was not a mobilization, and asked for advice.

"In view of the plans outlined by Major General Duncan," the governor said, "kindly advise me whether it is your desire that the plans and suggestions of General Duncan be carried out on National Defense Day or whether General Duncan's plans and suggestions should be disregarded and the national test day plans be confined to the demonstrations on the part of the military forces of the country, state and nation, and the patriotic societies as originally understood, under which the state of Nebraska is officially co-operating."

Coolidge's Reply
President Coolidge replied as follows:

"Replying to your telegram of July 30, I am informed the war department plans contemplate a practice exercise by all military forces and officials, national, state and local, associated with steps necessary to demonstrate the defense policy enacted by congress."

"In this connection, a patriotic demonstration has been suggested to be participated in as desired by state and local communities. While the plans of General Duncan practice exercise should guide all components of the army of the United States, plans of the patriotic demonstration are dependent on state and local desires and are intended to be purely voluntary."

Judge Curbed State
"No, we are not going to have every word challenged," said Judge Caverly as Mr. Crowe objected to these conclusions about the government. "Proceed doctor," said the doctor. He added to Mr. Crowe: "and you will have plenty of chance to go into that subject on cross examination."

The doctor said that Dickie was held down so by the government that he got in the habit of telling her lies, and his was significant as later he became intimate with a Jack Mengel, a youth who turned criminal and was sent to prison.

"Dickie was held down to such an extent that he led a life different from that of other children and when he escaped from this government control he, in his own words, 'grew up overnight'."

Recited Auto Accident
The doctor said that at the age of 15, Loeb was in an automobile accident in which he suffered the concussion of the brain.

College brought "an interesting and rather unusual career," Dr. White said. He brought out that Loeb had studied all sorts of things, history, zoology, morals and other miscellaneous subjects.

"His opinions of what he got from the study of morals was considerable of a jumble of nonsense," said Dr. White. "He had a feeling for the under dog and felt he properly might rise up and take the law in his hands."

Loeb followed the lines of least resistance, and had no idea about what he was trying to fit himself for."

Resuming, the doctor said: "Dickie did not believe in God. In later years, because he was mentally older than youths of his age, he had been thrown in with older youths and had begun to drink, largely in imitation of older boys," said the doctor.

Loeb said, according to the doctor, he felt inferior, had grown up a feeling he was not wanted, and had a distinct feeling of inferiority. His falsehoods became of a more positive character. If some one in the family would ask where he had been, he would not only negatively lie, but would build up a positive yarn, inventing a lot of things he had not been doing."

imbedded in the makeup of the individual," he said.

"Inner Mental Life"
The doctor talked about the "inner mental life," and Mr. Crowe interrupted.

"Just what question is he answering now?"

The court allowed the lecture to continue.

"The inner mental life of an individual gives us an insight into his real life, his ideas, ambitions and desires," said Dr. White.

He said that the "organs of the mind, their various functions and the mechanisms by which they work" were as well known as the functions of the heart, liver and kidneys.

"The patient discloses himself to us in quite the same way an X-ray would reveal his physical state," said Dr. White. He launched into a 300 word sentence amplifying this and when he finished Judge Caverly declared a recess.

"As a result of your examination of Richard Loeb have you been able to form and have you formed, an opinion as to his mental condition?" asked Mr. Bachrach.

Mr. Crowe objected and the defense agreed with him that everything that had been done and all information that he had obtained be given just as it had been done and as he had obtained it.

Called Loeb "Dickie"
The doctor then launched into a long description of the examination of Loeb, referring to the youth as "Dickie."

"Do you mean Richard Loeb," defendant in this case?" asked Crowe.

"Yes, you don't object to my calling him 'Dickie' do you?" replied the doctor.

A few minutes later, when Mr. Crowe objected to a reference to a governess, Judge Caverly said:

"The doctor has said he got that from Dickie himself. You surely don't mean to say that what Dickie told the doctor is incompetent."

Dr. White described first the "historical factors" he had discovered about Loeb. He mentioned the defendant's poor health in the first four and a half years of life and that for the next six or seven years he was under the influence of a governess, who the doctor said, was "some what prudish, austere and rigid in character."

"No, we are not going to have every word challenged," said Judge Caverly as Mr. Crowe objected to these conclusions about the government.

"Proceed doctor," said the doctor. He added to Mr. Crowe: "and you will have plenty of chance to go into that subject on cross examination."

A Boston woman with a broad social experience for some years has been observing girls in a finishing school to observe these five rules in judging a man: See him in work—notice his attitude toward his associates. See him when things go wrong. See how he acts in a trying situation. Determine his attitude toward his mother. And remember—society manners are merely superficial.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—Egg Beater.

Never put an egg beater to soak

and never let the eggs get wet.

Keep Cellar Closed.
During the hot weather keep the cellar closed by day and air it out at night. It will be drier if the hot air of the day is shut out.

Saves Time.
If the first course of your dinner is a cold course you can save time by having it on the table when the meal is announced.

Watch Your Drugs.
Never keep drugs in your medicine chest for more than a year unless you are sure they are the sort that do not deteriorate.

Wash Dish Towels.
Wash your dish towels at least once a day in hot water and soap. Hang out of doors if possible, if not on a rack in the air and light. They should be boiled at least once a week.

Dry Tin Thoroughly.
Always dry tinware thoroughly so it will not rust.

Butter Spreaders.
If you use butter spreaders they should be on the bread and butter plate or beside the spoons.

SISTER Mary's KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY.

A Daily Menu for the Stout and Thin.

EAT AND—LOSE WEIGHT.

Breakfast—One-half cup stewed rhubarb, 1 piece crisp broiled bacon, one soft-boiled egg, 1 piece crisp gluten toast, hot water.

Luncheon—One cup skimmed milk, 1 lettuce sandwich.

Dinner—Two broiled lamb chops, 2 tablespoons green peas, orange, and watercress salad, 1/2 cup skimmed milk junket with 1/2 cup berries.

Bedtime—One cup skimmed milk, 1/2 cup berries.

Total calories, 1667. Protein, 242; fat, 292; carbohydrate, 533. Iron, .0188 gram.

Perhaps you find that a hearty breakfast is more to your needs than no breakfast and a hearty luncheon. This menu is planned to take care of this circumstance. Or you may prefer an afternoon tea to the bedtime "refreshment." Suit your diet to your mode of living.

The lettuce sandwich is made of whole wheat bread and about 1 ounce of head lettuce. No butter, but you may sprinkle the lettuce with a teaspoonful of oil dressing, made with mineral oil if you choose.

If the top is poured from a bottle of whole milk and the milk left in the bottle poured into a glass, the milk in the glass is practically skimmed milk. However, many dairies and lunch counters and restaurants can furnish genuine skimmed milk if you worry about your calories when you "skim" the milk yourself.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Breakfast—One-half cup stewed rhubarb, 2 pieces broiled bacon, one soft-boiled egg, 2 slices whole wheat toast, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 cup cocoa.

Mid-morning lunch—One large glass sandwich.

Luncheon—Two tablespoons macaroni and cheese, 1/2 head lettuce with 2 tablespoons Russian dressing, one peach puff, 1/4 cup cream, 2 slices whole wheat bread, 1 tablespoon butter.

Afternoon tea—Four tablespoons pineapple frappe, 2 nut cookies.

Dinner—One cup cream of tomato soup, 2 broiled lamb chops, 1 large baked potato, 4 tablespoons buttered peas, orange and watercress salad, 1/2 cup whole milk junket with 1/2 cup berries and 2 tablespoons whipped cream.

Bedtime—One cup whole milk.

Total calories, 3852. Protein, 426; fat, 158; carbohydrate, 1840. Iron, .0214 gram.

A few nuts can be sprinkled over the orange in this salad. Chops are a light dinner meat so the nuts increase fat and protein content of the dinner. French dressing is poured over the salad just before serving.

While on a gaining diet be sure you rest for a few minutes after each meal. This gives the stomach a chance to digest its food in peace, as it were. Good digestion and the assimilation of the food you eat are necessary if you would gain in weight. (Copyright, 1924, NEA Service, Inc.)

Eighth Birthday Was Celebrated

Imogene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Littrell of Eldora yesterday celebrated her eighth birthday anniversary at her home. Ten little friends called at her home and surprised her in the afternoon and a happy afternoon was spent in playing games.

Mrs. Littrell served a tempting birthday luncheon to the youngsters with the birthday cake as the feature.

After a merry time in play and refreshments the children departed at a late hour for their homes leaving the small hostess with many tokens of their regard.

Miss Lois Keyes Honored Last Eve

Last evening at her home on Highland avenue, Miss Grace Byers, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Pohn H. Byers, entertained a company of friends, honoring Miss Lois Keyes, whose marriage to Niles Palmer is to take place the latter part of August.

Garden flowers were effectively used in the pretty decorations.

There were guests for three tables of bridge, Mrs. Roy McCreary winning the first prize and Miss Dorothy Palmer winning the second prize.

After bridge was enjoyed, Miss Keyes was given a puzzle to solve in strings. She was asked to follow various strings to their destination and on doing so she found a gift at the end of each one, each guest presenting her with a lovely gift.

To complete the pleasure of all a tempting two-course luncheon was served miniature bouquets being the lovely favors.

Were Married on Saturday

The marriage of Elmer Anderson and Miss Maybelle Jacobs, both of Morrison, took place in Dixon Saturday afternoon, Rev. P. H. Case of the Presbyterian church uniting the lives of the young couple.

They were attended by Miss Evelyn Anderson, a sister of the groom and Lawrence Boyung of Sterling, who acted as bridesmaid and best man. The ceremony was also witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wentz of Morrison.

The bride's gown was of soft grey crepe de chine with hat and slippers to match, while her bridesmaid wore a gown of pale blue georgette. The entire party enjoyed the evening in Dixon, and the following morning Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wentz and baby daughter, left by auto for Chicago. They also visited in Berwyn and Elmhurst and returned to Morrison late Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are at present making their home with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. evening.

Anderson of Malvern, but a little later on will probably go to Chicago where Mr. Anderson expects to follow the occupation of mechanical draftsman.

Both of the contracting parties are well known and have a host of friends who wish them happiness and success in their future.

A SUPER-CLAY Brought me beauty and perennial youth.

By Edna Wallace Hopper.

I look back on a glorious career. First, as a famous beauty. Then for 25 years a stage star. And now, at a grandmother's age, a beauty still, playing a beauty's part.

I owe all that to several factors, but the greatest is a new-type clay. Now I have arranged with druggists and to let Edna Wallace Hopper let counters to supply it to every woman. I want it to bring to others what I brought to me—multiplied beauty, decades of added youth.

My White Youth Clay. Old clays were crude and muddy. Mine is white, refined and dainty. Old types had the clay—mine has two. There are eleven ingredients embodied in mine, to bring the maximum results.

I owe this clay to men who have given it many years of scientific study. It is a super-clay, amazing in its quick and lasting benefits. I have seen many plain girls become beauties with one application. I have seen older women seem to drop ten years.

Clay is a beauty essential. No woman can look her best without it, no woman keeps her youth. Look at France—where girls are all beauties and women all young. That is largely due to clay.

I have no great interest in urging women to use my particular clay. But I do urge them to use some clay. I have found that mine brings multiplied results, but better the old types than none.

The magical effects. My White Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs or mars it. It draws out the causes of black heads and blemishes. It brings the blood to the skin to nourish—and revive it. The result is a rosy afterglow which so amazes and delights. Husbands tell me they hardly know their wives after they use White Youth Clay.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. It wards off every sign of age. I will gladly mail sample if you mail this coupon.

After sickness and where rickets are suspected they are especially valuable. No need to give them any more nasty Cod Liver Oil—these tablets are made to take the place of that good but evil smelling stomach upsetting medicine and they surely do it. They do put on flesh.

My son, 16, became thin and pale and did not gain needed nourishment from his food until he took McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets. In a little over two months he gained eleven and a half pounds and feels and looks 100 per cent better."

Rice, the party being in the nature of a farewell, as Miss Rice is leaving Freeport the last of the week.

Miss Rice will be very much missed, by the young set of Freeport, as she has made a place for herself in the social life, being one of the greatest favorites during the last year.

Her friends have the consolation that she will be but a short distance from Freeport, making it possible for frequent returns.—Freeport Journal-Standard of Wednesday.

Rice Sells His Hotel at Freeport; to Move

M. E. Rice, former landlord of the Nachusa Tavern, has sold the Senate Hotel at Freeport, which he has been operating about a year, to R. N. Selby, the new proprietor taking possession today. It is expected Mr. Rice will move to Sterling.

The Freeport Journal, commenting on the sale of the Senate Hotel in that city by Mr. Rice, says: "A year ago M. E. Rice, owner of the Nachusa Tavern at Sterling, disposed of his business in those cities and took over the Senate. He purchased the common stock, which was held by Mrs. Frank Keck, widow of a former manager and part owner of the Senate, and the preferred stock from the various holders. At the same time, he purchased the claims against the hotel from the creditors' committee and within a brief time had the hotel on a firm financial basis.

"Mr. Rice, who has been engaged in hotel and theater business for a number of years, conducted the Senate during the year of his ownership in a manner both efficient and satisfactory to its patrons, so that it has become one of the most successful hotels in this part of the country."

Children's Circus Tomorrow

Tomorrow night a big attraction arrives. It is the Children's Circus. One feature of this show has been a big act on a large vaudeville circuit. It is the act in which the troupe of trained cockatoos appear. Then those who remember the old fashioned Punch and Judy show will certainly enjoy a revival of that feature while those who have never seen one will be amused to say the least. Altogether with its juggler, clown and magician it is the most complete novelty act which has been placed on the chautauqua platform for years.

Sunday's program need only be mentioned to recommend it. At 2:30 Kable Brothers' band will give a concert and from the praise they receive from all sources promise a pleasant afternoon of music. The policy of no admission charge on Sunday will be continued.

Gave Fine Program

The Lyric Glee Club and John B. Ratto succeeded in pleasing their audience immensely. The program of last night only rivals the program of the night before in excellence. It would be difficult to decide in favor of either, since each is in a class by itself.

The Lyric Glee Club as was expected was very popular. With instrumental and vocal selections they succeeded in getting encore after encore in appreciation of their good work. They sang in a prelude to the evening's program. In the evening they preceded Mr. Ratto and prepared the way for him. Beginning with a group of quartette selections, they went on to play a group of instrumental numbers. Then followed a group of negro songs which might be said to have captivated the audience. The final number was a very good interpretation of "The Lost Chord."

Ratto Scored Success

John B. Ratto then appeared and from the minute he came on the platform until he said "goodnight," there was not a dull moment. While he was making up he kept up a continuous conversation narrating the situations which he was placing the particular character whom he was impersonating. The old farmer was telling about old times, the 105 per cent American, a German who was running for office and was making a stump speech, told the audience some interesting things. Then the Irishman who was elected to be a judge and didn't know a thing about the law and legal terms was funny in every sense of the word when he attempted to preside over the court. The final type which he impersonated was of a most satirical preacher at a football game in which his grandson was participating.

There followed a series of impersonations of famous characters with whom everyone is familiar. He not only impersonated their appearance but also their voice putting into their mouths words which he found in official documents of theirs. These characters were great World War figures. King Peter of Serbia, Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Marshall Foch, Gen. Pershing, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Uncle Sam were all present to make their contribution to the pleasure of the evening.

Mr. Ratto closed his entertainment with a little moralizing on make-believe. He said that the game of make-believe is more genuine than real life itself and admonished everyone to pick out the part they would like to play in life and then play it to the best they know how so that at the end of life all may be well. Entertainers like Mr. Ratto are filling a mission in life that leaves this world a little better than it was before.

The crowd at the Assembly is improving daily. It might be that in a few days the big auditorium will be filled if the present rate of increase continues. One thing is certain, namely that every one who is present cannot help but feel that the program committee chose wisely when they billed the different attractions that have come already. Last night a good audience was on hand to enjoy the high class entertainment offered by the Glee Club and the Impersonator.

Tonight Professor Moulton will be on hand to deliver his illustrated lecture on Astronomy. From a man like Professor Moulton, we may expect great things. The lecture will

THE BUGS GO TO WAR.

Grasshoppers have been so thick in Texas
this summer the people have had to fight
them with arsenic by the trainload.
In South Africa the government has just appropriated $1,500,000 to fight a plague of beetles, the worst on record. In one district, near the Orange river, a single swarm of locusts
"extending in an unbroken mass 150 miles in length" is reported to have devoured
very bit of green vegetation.
The peculiar weather of the last few years has been very favorable to insects of all kinds.
Many worms have been destroying crops here in the Middle West. Grasshopper plagues, further progress by the boll weevil. So on,
insect enemies, countless billions of them,
driving farmers nearly frantic.
Reputable scientists frequently point out
that a battle is on, between men and insects,
for supremacy on earth.
Some even believe that the insects will win.
It wouldn't take many insect victories, on
the scale of the ravages of the boll weevil,
which is wrecking the American cotton growing industry, to bring men close to starvation.
The corn borer, for instance, gets as far behind control as the boll weevil, it would evtually be a greater national loss than the money Uncle Sam spent in the World War.
Fortunately, man wins in the long run.
Like the disease-carrying mosquito. It has been vanquished, but it has been driven back—curbed.
Everything in nature has its destroyer and in turn, a destroyer itself. Man kills the insect. The insect kills man, by conveying disease, and also destroys his crops.
Falling water destroys the mountain gradually by washing it away. The mountain de-troys the valley, slowly filling it.
Grasshoppers eat the crops. Chickens eat
the grasshoppers. Man eats the chickens.
Destruction balances or equals construction. The destroying and constructing are manifestations of the activity known as life. Nothing is permanent in our existence of three dimensions. Life is an experience, a rune, a succession of changes.
It would, after all, be a dull life if we didn't have these changes—including insects battling. We'd win against the insects easily
if we were as united and active against them
when we destroy each other in war.

HE KNOWS, BUT WILL HE?

It is a wise man who knows when to stop it," says Rev. James Anderson of Syracuse.
It is a wiser man who stops upon knowing it. The country is full of men who are ruined by the daily grind, who know it, yet, with one excuse or another, don't stop.
They can't afford it, they think, and yet a rest is a money-making enterprise, in long run.
The old shop or office wouldn't get it, if they laid off; and so, the rising of lieutenants in the business get no chance to show the managerial stuff that's in them, and, because they haven't been tested
even a chance at experience, the business breaks down when death or disease comes.
The old man's vacation.
The business that is dependent solely upon one man, day after day, is in a shaky condition in these times, and the best way to teach how to swim is to take him by the hind and throw him into seven or eight feet of water; that is, get out and give him a chance to show what he is in.
A good vacation is medicine and a profitable business enterprise, and every fellow whose nose is on the grindstone of hard work
is entitled to it.

This sounds just like a doctor coming in
and saying "You're sick," and letting it go at that, with no attempt to relief. So, we'll add a prescription:
Take a fish rod, or a gun, or a put-stick,
or the old "Lizzie" and go 'way off somewhere
where telegrams, letters and other worldly affairs, save, perhaps, mosquitoes, can't get at you.
The grindstone will go 'round and 'round
as usual and some bright young lieutenant will be sharpening his wits on it, for the good of the business.

PEACE-TIME SLAUGHTER.

A police pudge, speaking after eight years' experience in a traffic court, declares that the battlefields of France were safer than are our American highways.
"In eighteen months," he says, "we lost 48,000 killed in France. In a similar period in America, just closed, we had 96,000 persons slain by automobiles, and 25,000 of that number were children."

Here is an indictment that comes home to every community and every family.
Much of the carelessness, it is agreed, is on the part of drivers. Yet this is by no means the whole story. A large share of the fatalities are caused by carelessness just as inexcusable on the part of pedestrians.

The present traffic problem is something quite new in the world. It is destined to become more and more serious, as the traffic increases in volume. It can be coped with,
as all human difficulties can. But the matter must have more concentrated attention than has yet been given it on the part of the entire public.

It is not merely a question of automobile drivers being more careful and obeying traffic rules better. It is a question of better traffic engineering, along new lines to take care of the new streams and types of traffic. It is a question of improved, simplified, uniform
traffic rules, for drivers and for pedestrians,
made known to all of both classes, and obeyed
by all. It is a question of trained and tested drivers. It is a question of genuine education of the entire public, until everybody knows what ought to be done and is willing not only to take pains but to spend money
for improvement.

GOLD.

This is news to most people: Gold is sometimes prescribed by physicians as medicine.
It's taken in certain kinds of despondency
where the patient is on the borderline of suicidal tendencies.

A few doses of "aurum metallicum" (gold),
properly administered by a doctor, often make the melancholy person cheerful and full of pep, even optimistic.

The coveted yellow metal has similar powers, received externally. Its possession or loss sways human emotions as much as friendship and love.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 23—EVERYBODY IN FREE

So he hunted all over his amusement park.

"The very idea!" said Mister Zip,
when the Twins told him what Scamper and Scramble Squirrel had done.
"If those squirrel boys are getting into my park for nothing, sliding down the trees the way they do, and the mole boy is getting in by digging tunnels under the fence, it's no wonder I'm not making my fortune. I shall have to put a stop to it at once!"

So he hunted all over his amusement park until he found the squirrels. They were buying peanuts at the peanut stand.

"I've got a nickel left for buttermilk," said Scamper to Scramble.
"So have I," said Scramble to Scamper.

Of course you'll think it queer
that they were not buying lemonade or soda water or ice cream cones,
but squirrels love buttermilk much better than any of them.

Mister Zip and Nancy and Nick heard them.

"I think if you have a nickel left,
you'd better give it to me to pay
your way in," said the fairman.
"What for?" asked Scramble.

"You came in down the sycamore tree," said Mister Zip, "and that's not allowed. The sign says 'Birds and Babies Free,' but you are not birds and you are not babies, either,
so you will have to pay me. It doesn't say anything about squirrels
getting in free."

"The only difference between us
and birds," said Scamper brightly,
"is that we've got fur and they've got feathers."

"Hopping rain toads!" cried Mister Zip. "I suppose you could fly across the ocean then."

"Oh, no! We couldn't do that," admitted Scramble Squirrel.

"And I suppose birds have four feet," said Mister Zip.

"Oh, no! We don't mean that,
either," said Scamper, blushing to the end of his nose.

"And I suppose you lay eggs and sing sweetly and do everything that birds do," went on the fairman severely.

"Oh, no, we don't do any of those things," said both the squirrel boys bashfully. "We guess we're not like birds at all, Mister Zip."

"Except that you want something for nothing," said Mister Zip. "I see."

Then he went on more kindly. "I don't suppose you two boys thought you were doing anything dishonest.
But you were—just the same as if you had bought something and not paid for it."

"We're as sorry as we can be!"
said Scamper. "And we'll give you
all the rest of our vacation money.
We were only in fun, Mister Zip, honestly we were."

"Well, if you are really and truly sorry," said the fairman, "you may stay."

Nancy and Nick had slipped off
and now they came back with more.
"Say, Mister Zip," cried Nick,
"what do you think? We just saw Wally and Willy and Woolly Wood-chuck come into Happy Go Lucky Park through a tunnel they had dug from their underground house. They all got in for nothing."

"Hopping rain toads!" cried the fairman in dismay. "Whatever will I do? I am ruined! Now I can never make my fortune."

Suddenly Nancy had an idea.
"Why don't you let everybody come

In for nothing, Mister Zip?" she people will come and they'll all spend money on good things to eat and on having a good time. You'll make twice as much."

"Hopping rain toads!" cried the fairman in glee. "What a wise head you have, Nancy. That's just what I'll do!"

PERSIA PLEDGES
SATISFACTION TO AMERICAN GOVT.

Will Leave No Ground
for Anxiety on Part of United States.

Washington, July 31.—The Persian government has assured the state department it will take steps with regard to the Imbrie incident that will leave "no ground whatever for any anxiety on the part of the United States government."

Replying to the American communication demanding full protection for American citizens in Persia and threatening to break off diplomatic relations as a result of the killing of Vice Consul Imbrie and the subsequent attack upon his widow, the Persian government declared it would "repair the incident and fulfill the points that are suggested" by the United States.

The reply said also that the imperial government "is making extreme efforts in pursuing and punishing the persons who caused and perpetrated the killing of Mr. Imbrie and it will not hesitate to take any kind of steps
in this connection."

Concerning the question of security of American nationals in Persia, and particularly American official representatives, the communication says:

Exercise for Mother

"Exercise is essential to an expectant mother," the Mann family doctor advised Mrs. Mann when her first baby was being awaited.

"But be careful what exercises are taken and how strenuously you undertake them. Of all exercises at such a time walking is about the best.
These walks should not be too long nor at too rapid a gait.

"After the walk is ended return to the house and lie down for about an hour and get a good rest. If after the rest, you find you are not refreshed, it's a pretty good sign you have walked too much and go a little easier next time.

"Most patients find that each day they can go a little farther than previously.
"Only with the greatest care should more strenuous sports such as swimming or tennis, be undertaken.
"But fresh air and recreation are important—be sure to get them."

POISON ABSORBED BY BODY IS HELD CAUSE MAN'S DEATH

Death of Prisoner in Rockford Jail Has Mysterious Angle.

Rockford, Aug. 1.—Death from poisoning, the poison being received into his body either by absorption through the skin or by inhalation, was the verdict returned by a jury at an inquest held by Coroner Fred C. Dixon into the death of Peter Lipstuchis, age 30, who expired early Wednesday morning at Rockford hospital after becoming critically ill in the city jail.

Did Not Swallow Poison
Lipstuchis, who was arrested on July 22 on a charge of intoxication and who had been held in the police station jail in default of payment of a $25 fine, was found unconscious on a cot in a cell at 7 o'clock last Monday night. He had been vomiting and bleeding from the nose. His face was purple in color.

He was rushed to Rockford hospital in the police ambulance. Examining physicians were unable to find any trace of poison in the man's stomach and there were no indications that he had swallowed any.

Shoes Dyed a Week Ago
Owing to the body and clothing having a strong odor of shoe dye, it was believed that he had been poisoned by wearing a pair of newly dyed shoes. Cases of this kind are said to be rare, but of record.

However, investigation developed that in cases of poisoning from wearing newly dyed shoes, illness developed a few hours after the shoes were put on the feet. Lipstuchis had been confined in the jail for seven days previous to being found unconscious and officials were certain his shoes had not been dyed within this period. Neither had he appeared to be ill until found unconscious.

Disinfectant Kept Under Lock
Wednesday morning when interested physicians compared the odor of the cleaning solution used in the jail and the odor on Lipstuchis' body, the two are said to have been the same. The disinfectant is composed of benzine and a number of other articles and has practically the same odor as shoe polish or shoe dye.

The disinfectant is kept under lock and the examination of the dead man's stomach is said to have shown that he did not drink the liquid.

Body Absorbed Poison?
The theory held today was that some of the cleaning fluid had been placed on the bedding and that the prisoner was poisoned by his body absorbing it while he lay asleep. However, there are other prisoners in the jail and there were some in the truck when Lipstuchis collapsed and none suffered any harmful effects.

No relatives of the dead man could be located this morning. Lipstuchis was suffering from an ulcer or abscess on his left leg which is said to have developed gangrene before death. The ulcer is said to have been caused by a fall sustained many months ago.

New York, Aug. 1.—Fred Duesenberg, the world's greatest breeder of mechanical horses, is in town.

His racing cars have won automobile races on two continents. Jimmy Murphy, driving one, was the only American driver in an American-made car to win a French Grand Prix race. That was in 1921 at Le Mans, France.

Duesenberg built the car that officially traveled faster on four wheels than any other object. It was driven at a speed of 156.4 miles an hour over the hard sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., by Tommy Milton.

Sixty-six world's records belong to Duesenberg.

Duesenberg's most famous victory was in the International 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speed.

millionaire pilot, drove from behind to win in the most thrilling finish ever seen in an automobile race. A new track record for the distance—88.24 miles an hour—was established.

The Duesenberg that won got its speed from a device known as a supercharger.

Yesterday Duesenberg confided to me where the perplexing supercharger problem was solved.

It was in a church in Indianapolis, in the middle of a sermon about something Duesenberg doesn't even remember.

Immediately after the church service was completed, Duesenberg went to his drawing board and worked out the details of the idea that came to him in the quiet of a Sunday service. It made his car a winner.

Money, difficult to capture at the easiest, is found in strange places.

A ten-year-old boy saw a deserted ice box in a vacant lot. In curiosity he examined it. He found $180. The police are holding it for a claimant. Mike Monfedi, a laundry wagon driver, found $955 in a pillow slip one of his customers had given him. He returned it to the owner.

"Thank you," was his only reward.

John Clodfield is here searching for J. T. Hernandez.

Twenty years ago Hernandez, a stranger, approached Clodfield, a visitor, in the lobby of a hotel, and asked Clodfield to cash a check.

Against his best judgment, and disobeying warnings of hotel clerks and signs, Clodfield cashed the stranger's check.

Now, after 20 years, Clodfield is searching out the stranger.

The check was good and Clodfield wants to hold a reunion with an honest man.

Now this NEW luncheon recipe is going over the whole country, most amazingly

IT'S one of those "different things"—simple yet unusual—that every now and then becomes a vogue over night; a new, quick-cooked luncheon, with an oddly refreshing appeal. A woman sent us the recipe. Then, we asked 50 others to try it—and that is how it started. You may like it, too. Clip this from the paper and try it.

Ingredients: 2 cups QUICK QUAKER, 4 cups water, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 level tablespoons cocoa and 4 of sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Bring water to a boil. Add cocoa and sugar mixed to a paste with boiling water; then slowly stir in the oats. Cook 3 to 5 minutes. Add vanilla. Serve hot or cold with cream. Wonderful chilled, moulded and served in slices.

BROWNS' PITCHERS
HUMBLED YANKEES
IN BARGAIN BILLLeague Leaders Got It
Twice in Same Place
Thursday P. M.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
St. Louis' southpaws proved too much for the Yankees yesterday and the Browns romped home with both ends of a double header 2-1 and 5-4. Wingard in the first game, had the Yankees at his mercy, limiting them to five bingles. Danforth was the Yank nemesis in the second. Babe Ruth was the only one able to solve the left hand slants of the Brown twirler gathering two singles in the first, and a homer in the second. His circuit clout was his 33rd for the season, and his 14th this month, establishing a new monthly record.

The double defeat out down the Yankees led to one half game over Washington, as the Senators defeated Detroit 1-0.

Harvey McClellan, substituting for Eddie Collins was a big factor in Chicago's victory over Boston 5-4. The Athletics and the Indians broke even in a double header, Philadelphia taking the first 7-6 and Cleveland the second 4-3 in a ten inning battle. Speaker's double, chasing Summa over the plate, was the deciding blow in the second encounter.

Giants Drubbed Again.

John Mc Gray's Giants took another drubbing at the hands of the Pirates, in a game that rained limited to six innings. The score was 5-0. It was the Pittsburgh team's seventh straight win and placed them only eight games behind the league leading New Yorkers. Chicago remains in second place, six games behind.

Chicago evened up the series with Brooklyn, winning a closely contested game 4-1. Barrett's hitting for the Cubs was the feature of the game, the first sacker driving in all of Chicago's tallies.

Defeat once more was Philadelphia's portion, when the Cardinals batted Mitchell out of the box in the first inning, scoring four runs, enough to win. The final score was 6-3.

fifth and last, The Expression came in a length ahead to cop from Eugenia Harvester.

Sam Harris, driving Harris Axtien, beat the Kivitz entry, Delana Harvester in the $700, 2:18 trot. Peter Baldwin, third and Golden Snow was fourth.

The fourth race, 2:16 trot was undecided at the end of three heats, which ended at 7 p. m. Peter Klingson, Tootsie Trask and Mr. Harvester won heats in that order.

Defeat once more was Philadelphia's portion, when the Cardinals batted Mitchell out of the box in the first inning, scoring four runs, enough to win. The final score was 6-3.

Veteran Horse Trainer of

FATHER OF MRS. JOHN ALDEN
PRESCOTT VERY ILL.

(Extract from "The Morning Argosy")
The invitations to a large party to have been given by Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Prescott this evening have been recalled, and Mrs. Prescott has left hurriedly for the home of her father, whose illness is serious.

Mrs. Prescott's parents, accompanied by their youngest daughter and her fiancé, Mr. Karl Whitney, returned from Europe about a month ago, and they were joined in New York by Mrs. Prescott. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton and their daughter have been some months in England with Miss Hamilton's fiancé.

Mr. Hamilton was not well during the latter part of his stay abroad, and during his stay in New York his illness became more apparent. Since arriving at his home he has grown steadily worse.

Yesterday the invitations for Miss Hamilton's wedding to Mr. Karl Whitney were stopped just as they were being delivered at the post office, and the invitations to Mrs. Prescott's party were recalled.

Marriage of Paula Perier's Publicity Man.

(On the Dramatic Page of "The Argosy")

This evening at the Iroquois Hotel the marriage of Miss Beatrice Grimshaw and Mr. Richard Summers will be solemnized. The bride has many friends in this city. She had come over to be present at the party to have been given by Mr. and Mrs. Prescott, which has been called off because of the serious illness of Mrs. Prescott's father.

Miss Grimshaw was Mrs. Prescott's maid of honor three years ago, and her marriage to Mr. Summers had been planned as a surprise for Mrs. Prescott's guests at her third anniversary.

Mrs. Prescott's hurried departure for the home of her father made necessary a change of plans. Miss Grimshaw will be married at the Iroquois Hotel tonight with Mr. Sydney Carlton as best man and Mrs. Sally Atherton as matron of honor.

Mr. Summers is one of the staff of the Pinnacle Moving Picture Production Co., and as such he has piloted the beautiful star, Paula Perier to fame. It is expected that Miss Perier will come up from New York, where she is staying at present to attend the wedding.

The setting up of campaign and electoral machinery will have progressed by that time, said leaders, to the point where a direct appeal may be made effectively to the voters led by the candidates themselves.

The WINDMILL with a RECORD

The Auto-oiled Aermotor has behind it 35 years of wonderful success. It is not an experiment.

The Auto-oiled Aermotor is the Genuine Self-Oiling Windmill, with every moving part fully and constantly oiled.

Oil an Aermotor once a year and it is always oiled. It never makes a squeak. The double gears run in oil in a tightly enclosed gear case. They are always flooded with oil and are protected from dust and sleet.

The Auto-oiled Aermotor is so thoroughly oiled that it runs in the slightest breeze. It gives more service for the money invested than any other piece of machinery on the farm.

You do not have to experiment to get a windmill that will run a year with one oiling. The Auto-oiled Aermotor is a tried and perfected machine.

Our large factory and our superior equipment enable us to produce economically and accurately. Every purchaser of an Aermotor gets the benefit from quantity production. The Aermotor is made by a responsible company which has specialized in steel windmills for 35 years.

SYNOPSIS

Sir Oliver Trevelyan, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, is betrothed to Rosemund Godolphin, but the marriage is opposed by Rosemund's brother, Peter. By repeated insults Peter finally provokes Oliver to threaten murder, and when Oliver's young half-brother, Lionel, kills Peter in an unprovoked quarrel over a woman, suspicion falls on Oliver. Even Rosemund believes him guilty and asks him to explain the trail of blood found leading from the body to his doorway. Feeling bound to protect Lionel, Oliver can do nothing but protect his innocence. But he goes to the justices and asks them to draw up a document attesting to the fact that he bears on his body no mark of recent wound; that therefore the trail of blood, obviously that of the murderer, injured in the encounter, was not his. This document is taken away to hold in readiness until needed.

A few weeks later Lionel learns from Jasper Leigh, a pirate sea captain whose ship is lying in the harbor, that the queen has been petitioned to command the justices to bring Oliver to trial—which they had previously refused to do—and he fears that should Oliver clear himself his own implication would follow. Oliver meantime goes to Rosemund to lay the proof of his innocence before her, but she refuses to see him. Lionel tells him of the petition to the queen.

The morrow—a blustering day of late March—found him again at that ale-house at Poycumwick in the company of Jasper Leigh. A course had occurred to him, as the only course now possible. Last night his brother had muttered something of going to Killigrow with his proofs since Rosemund refused to receive him. Through Killigrow he would reach her, he had said, and he would yet see her on her knees craving his pardon for the wrong she had done him, for the cruelty she had shown him.

Lionel knew that Killigrow was absent from home just then, but he was expected to return by Easter, and to Easter there was but a week. Therefore he had little time in which to act, little time in which to execute the project that had come into his mind. He cursed himself for conceiving it, but held to it with all the strength of a weak nature.

Yet when he came to set face to face with Jasper Leigh in that little inn-parlor with the scrubbed table of plain deal between them, he lacked the courage to set his proposal forth. They drank sherry sulkily laced with brandy by Lionel's suggestion instead of the more customary mulled ale. Yet not until he had consumed best part of a pint of it did Lionel feel himself heartened to breaching his loathsome business. Through his head hummed the words his brother had said some time ago when first the name of Jasper Leigh had passed between them—"a desperate adventurer ripe for anything. So the price he high enough you may buy him body and soul."

Money enough to buy Jasper Leigh was ready to Lionel's hand, but it was Sir Oliver's money—the money that was placed at Lionel's disposal by his half-brother's open-handed bounty. And this money he was to employ for Oliver's utter ruin! He cursed himself for a filthy, contemptible hound; he cursed the foul fiend that whispered such suggestions into his mind; he knew himself, despised himself and reviled himself until he came to swear to be strong and to go through with whatever might await him sooner than be guilty of such baseness; the next moment that same resolve would set him shuddering again as he viewed the inevitable consequences that must attend it.

Suddenly the captain set him a question, very softly, that freed the train and blew all his lingering self-resistance into shreds.

"You'll ha' borne my warning to Sir Oliver?" he asked, lowering his voice so as not to be overheard by the vintner who was stirring beyond the thin wooden partition.

Master Lionel nodded, nervously fingering the jewel in his ear, his eyes shifting from their consideration of the seaman's coarse, weather-tanned and hairy countenance.

"I did," he said. "But Sir Oliver is headstrong. He will not stir."

"Will he not?" The captain stroked his bushy red beard and cursed profusely and horribly after the fashion of the sea. "Od's wounds. He's very like to swing if he bides him here."

"Aye," said Lionel, "if he bides." He felt his mouth turn dry as he spoke; his heart thudded, but his thumbs were softened by a slight insensibility which the liquor had produced in him.

He uttered the words in so curious a tone that the sailor's dark eyes peered at him from under his heavy-lidded eyebrows. There was alert inquiry in that glance. Master Lionel got up suddenly.

"Let us take a turn outside, captain," said he.

The captain's eyes narrowed. He scented guile. There was something plausibly odd about this young gentleman's manner. He tossed off the remains of his sack, slapped down the pot and rose.

"Your servant, Master Trevelyan," said he.

Outside the gentleman untethered his horse from the iron ring to which he had attached the bridle; leading his horse he turned seaward and strode down the road that wound along the estuary toward Smithick.

A sharp breeze from the north was whipping the water into white peaks of foam; the sky was of a hard brightness and the sun shone brilliantly. The tide was running out, and the rock in the very neck of the haven was thrusting its black crest above the water. A cable's length this side of it rode the black hull and naked spars of the Swallow—Captain Leigh's ship.

Lionel stepped along in silence, very gloomy and pensive, hesitating even now. And the crafty mariner reading this hesitation and anxious to conquer it for the sake of such profit as he conceived might lie in the proposal which he scented, paved the way for him at last.

"I think that ye'll have some matter to propose to me," said he slyly. "Out with it, sir, for there never was a man more ready to serve you."

"The fact is," said Lionel, watching the other's face with a sidelong glance, "I am in a difficult position, Master Leigh."

"I've been in a many," laughed the captain, "but never yet in one through which I could not win. Strip forth your own, and haply I can do as much for you as I am wont to do for myself."

"Why, it is this wise," said the other. "My brother will assuredly hang as you have said if he bides

"Master Lionel nodded, nervously fingering the jewel in his ear."

him here. He is lost if they bring him to trial. And in that case, faith, I am lost too. It dishonors a man's family to have a member of it hanged. 'Tis a horrible thing to have happen."

"Indeed, indeed!" the sailor agreed encouragingly.

"I would abstract him from this," pursued Lionel, and at the same time cursed the foul fiend that prompted him such specious words to cloak his villainy. "I would abstract him from it, and yet 'tis against my conscience that he should go unpunished, for I swear to you, Master Leigh, that I abhor the deed—a cowardly, murderous deed!"

"Ah!" said the captain. And lest that grim ejaculation should check his gentleman he made haste to add:

"To be sure! To be sure!"

Master Lionel stopped and faced the other squarely, his shoulders to his horse.

"I'll be quite plain and open with you, Master Leigh. Peter Godolphin was my friend. Sir Oliver is no more than my half-brother. I would give a deal to the man who would abstract Sir Oliver secretly from the doom that hangs over him, and yet do the thing in such a way that Sir Oliver should not thereby escape the punishment he deserves."

The captain looked grim. He laid a finger upon Master Lionel's velvet doublet in line with that false heart of his.

"I am your man," said he. "But the risk is great. Yet ye say that ye'd give a deal."

"Yourself shall name the price," said Lionel quickly, his eyes burning feverishly, his cheeks white.

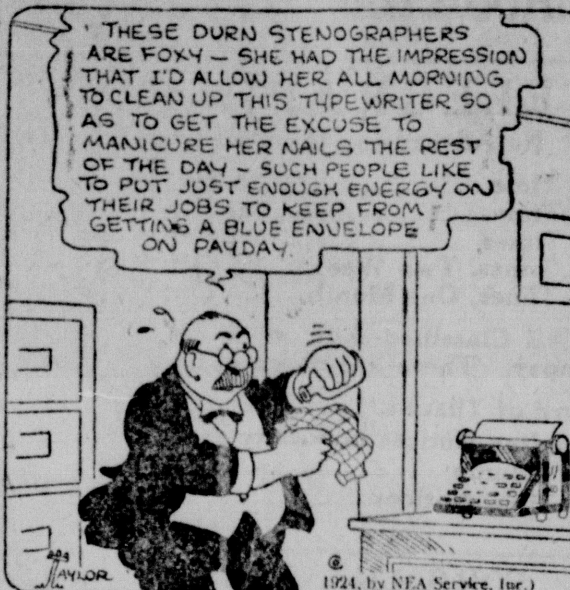

"Oh, I can contrive it, never fear," said the captain. "I know to a nicety what you require. How say you now—if I was to carry him overseas to the plantations where they lack toilers of just such thwags as his?"

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

Calves In Clover

Style will always be the judgment of the minority, rather than the majority. What everybody wears soon becomes as distasteful as the joke that everybody tells or the opinion that everybody voices. Character is lost in a crowd. Of course, there is nothing new under the sun, and engaged couples to the contrary notwithstanding, there is nothing new under the moon, either. So, the utmost that the designers can do is to give a new twist to the old things.

Golf stockings come in plain shades, stripes, plaids, diamonds, Jacquards and their familiar variations. The novelty of them is the colors—the blues, blue-grays, sands, fawns, buffs, yellows, nudes, black-and-whites and many more blended into striking combinations with turn-over tops differently patterned from the legs. Two plain designs are illustrated here typical of the multiplicity of patterns, simple and ornate, which are obtainable in long hose.

An all-important consideration in selecting one's golf stockings is their weight. Americans, as a rule, do not like the very heavy hose so much worn in England and Scotland. It is only appropriate for a cold, damp island climate. We prefer the lighter weights, such as those made up in thin wool, thin Hile, thin cotton or intermixtures of silk with wool.

Harmonizing sets, that is pull-over knitted jackets and golf stockings of the same fabric, pattern and color in solid shades and heather blendings are being worn by some who are fond of striking a match. For the man who cannot wear the usual golf hose with feet, because of heat or perspiration, there are footless stockings of many types which overcome the difficulty.

In golf dress, as in business dress, contrast, not harmony, is the spice of style. While pull-over jacket and stockings may match, the knickers should be of a different effect from the others, so that the whole turnout will not look monotonous, as it so often does. If plaid-patterned knickers are worn, the hosiery below should be plain, or striped, not also a plaid design. Golf garters used to be necessary to hold up one's stockings, but if the bottoms of the knickers are elastic-knit, they serve the purpose with less binding.

Carpenter promises to retire from the ring if Tunny whip him. . . . And Tunny ought to if he doesn't.

Mr. Mack can truthfully assert that none of the customers who attend his matinees ever debate the fair name of baseball by betting on the Athletics.

Miller Huggins say he will retire from baseball in 1925. . . . So far as the seven other American League managers are concerned his retirement will be just about five years too late.

America has won the Olympiad so many straight times that the other nations are beginning to think something is crooked about it.

Ducky Holmes stopped another fist with his jaw in Washington the other day. . . . It's clear they don't call him ducky on account of his ducking ability.

BELGIUM'S CHAMPION WRESTLER IS AN AVIATOR. . . . AND, OF COURSE HE'S A STAR AT THE FLYING FLY.

An effort to oust the Cardinals from the St. Louis ball park failed. . . . In the fans might have been more interested if the effort had been designed to oust them from the state.

Japan was last with one point in the Olympic finals if you want to know what is meant by all this Japanese exclusion stuff.

Leonard and Walker have finally been matched. . . . Now all that remains to be done is to get them to fight.

America's athletes did not fare very well in the water sports in Paris. . . . It may be presumed, however, that they did nobly in the joy water events.

SWIMMING HINTS

Swimmers who try to frighten beach citizens by staying under water will offend no one by failing to come up.

Swimmers who can't swim will gain nothing by going out in water over their heads. . . . There is enough rubbish at bottom of lake without adding to it.

Swimmers who wear gaudy jewelry on all occasions will find heavy iron anchors attached to neck both fashionable and appropriate.

Swimmers who dive from lofty heights should always pick out shallow places. . . . In this way science may soon find out what really happens when irresistible forces meet immovable object.

Swimmers who play practical jokes on lifeguards by screaming for help should never be ignored. If lifeguard hasn't a gun handy he should throw a 16-pound hammer, respecting all A. A. U. regulations, of course.

Swimmers of the simple sex who spend their time on beach getting cold of tan should remember that it takes more than one garment to make full suit of clothes.

The NERVOUS WRECK

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dad Morgan stands leaning against the coral fence on his Bar-M ranch, watching the approach of two riders. They are his daughter, Sally, and an eccentric young easterner who is visiting the ranch to recuperate from a nervous breakdown. The visitor is known as the Nervous Wreck—Wreck for short—and is a hopeless tenderfoot.

Dad tells Sally that Bob Wells, her fiancé, will be unable to escort her to the train next morning. She is disappointed. Sally has been educated in the east and "knows the ways of places far beyond the range," as Dad puts it. Dad Morgan's ranch is a rather small one, and there is a lot of talk about it. "It is a tough thing to do and a honorable rest. The busy years are behind it."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"I ain't got any kick," mused Dad. "I got mine; enough, anyhow. Let the rest of 'em hustle. They haven't come into their rheumatism yet. Only I'm sure sorry that Sally's going to miss her train."

So was Sally. But, true to Dad's mental prediction, she did not say much about it, even to Bob Wells, who had ridden twenty miles to explain and would have to ride back again that night. Bob was the sheriff. He was other things besides sheriff; things that were much more important in a material way. He had cattle of his own, and a couple of mining claims that promised, and he owned a general store at the county seat.

Dad Morgan said there wasn't a more likely young hustler in all the Montana than Bob Wells. And when Bob took to calling on Sally, Dad felt that the future was working itself out in a proper and prosperous fashion.

As nearly as Dad could figure it out, in the absence of direct information, Sally was going East to see about things for her trousseau. Anyhow, the sheriff seemed to be certain enough about it, and Sally made no denial. She had known Bob Wells since she first rode her own pony, as a little wild thing raised on the Bar-M, and she did not encounter any surprise in the idea of marrying him.

"I reckon," said Dad, as he glanced up from his supper, "that Bob's got more to lose by your getting that train than maybe anybody else around these parts."

The sheriff winked as he reached for the coffee pot and helped himself to another cup. He was a large, healthy and well-pleased young man with a slightly boisterous air, even in moments of repose.

Ma Morgan nodded, but made no comment. Ma was never very talkative; ordinarily she contented herself with confirmatory nods, the opinions and conclusions of others usually being sufficient for her.

"If it wasn't for the fact that they're riding the horse back, I'd ride over alone," said Sally.

"No chance," declared the sheriff. "Pooh! Why not? Why, Bob, I've done it. I rode as far as the railroad last summer and I know every inch of the trail. And it's only about thirty-five miles."

"Well, I wouldn't let you ride alone. Besides, there'll have to be a pack horse to take your traps. You can't manage everything, Sally."

Sally thought she could, and she felt a faint resentment at the contrary implication. But she had no intention of arguing it with Bob; he was always positive about things.

"Did you want to go to the railroad tomorrow?"

It was the Wreck speaking. All through supper he had been eating with a sleep voraciousness that amazed Dad Morgan to wonder if there were any nerves in the stomach.

"Why, I'd planned to go," said Sally. "but it seems we can't make it."

"Certainly we can make it," declared the Wreck, with sudden asperity in his voice. "Why not? I'll take you."

The sheriff laid down his knife and stared. The Wreck never failed to amuse him, but this was their third meeting. So the Wreck would take her to the train, would he? The sheriff glanced at Dad and grinned.

"On a horse?" he inquired.

"In a machine," answered the Wreck, shortly.

"Oh-h-h!" It was spoken with gusty good nature, but it carried a volume of scorn. So the Wreck thought, at any rate, for he glanced through his horn-rimmed glasses and pushed his plate back.

"Want me to drive you over in the machine?" he demanded, switching his glance to Sally. He flung it out as a sort of sweeping challenge that included even Ma.

"Why, I—"

"What for? You want to catch a train, don't you? Well, when I start catching trains, I catch 'em. Want to go?"

"Why, I—"

Sally looked at the sheriff. He shook his head authoritatively. "Can't be done, Sally. I know what I'm talking about. And besides—"

He paused to observe the Wreck, who had pushed his chair back from the table and risen. Sally nibbled at her lip; there were times when she wished Bob would not be so sweepingly authoritative.

"Any time tomorrow that you're ready, I'm ready," said the Wreck, regarding her with a stare that was almost belittling. "And anybody who tells you it can't be done is suffering from arrested mental development."

He limped out of the room, but there was something absurdly aggressive in his gait. Dad Morgan eyed him back appraisingly and then looked at the sheriff.

"Wreck's kind of saddle sore," he observed, mildly, "but he certainly keeps chipping."

"He's a nut," said the sheriff. "He can't do it in a million years."

"But he might, Bob," Sally had a look in her eye that boded a desire for discussion.

"What? In a flivver?"

"I've heard," said Dad Morgan, "not that I've got personal experience—but I've heard that folks can go 'most anywhere in them things, except in society."

CHAPTER II

The Two-By-Nothing Prairie

THE ranch buildings were miles back of them; how many, Sally could not exactly tell, for there was no speedometer on the flivver. But they were fifteen miles from the ranch, at least, and the railroad was still more miles to the north. By the trail which wound high along the eastern flank of Black Top it was about twenty miles, as nearly as Sally could figure. They could not follow the high trail, of course; somewhere a road branched, which they must take, and Sally was intent on watching for the road.

It was an odd sensation, bumping over the trail on wheels; it helped her to forget that there had been words with the sheriff the night before, just as he was saddling to ride back to his job at Fisher.

Once she remarked the fact to him that it was a pretty bad trail, after he had navigated a detour that carried them around a boulder.

"Bad trail?" he echoed, almost sharply. "You don't call this bad, do you? I call it a boulevard."

He was obsessed with a resolve to make the task so childishly simple that the sheriff would eat his words and be overwhelmed with mortification.

The Wreck's name was Henry Williams, and he belonged considerably farther east than Sally had ever been; as far as Pittsburg, in fact. His coming to the Bar-M had been without specific premeditation; it was merely an incident. It appeared in a great plan. They first sighted him in the middle of a forenoon, two weeks back, coming furiously up the coulee, with a radiator that boiled like Old Faithful and a carbon knock that sounded like the crack of doom. He brought the thing to a stop in the doorway, introduced himself, asked for water, tarried for lunch, tinkered with the car, stayed for supper, and then kept on staying.

How Fashions Defy Geographies Told by Nat. G. S.

Washington, D. C.—"Another pet theory must be assigned to the rag bag along with grandmother's black bombazine. Just because Chicago's winter slush originated the unfashionable goloshes, or water-logged marches of Holland made F. K. Dutchman take to wooden shoes, not all clothes arose from the necessity of protection against the weather," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"In fact, fashion has nearly always defied geography, and the flapper of F street or Broadway, in their chiffon hose and satin pumps in the midst of a January blast, or those who brave the arctic rays of a July sun in furs, are simply displaying atavistic tendencies, for clothes were first worn in warm and semi-tropical countries.

Garments Insignia of Rank.

"Man first adorned himself in garments to parade his position or rank before less fortunate individuals, who were content and thoroughly modest in a G-string or a headband. Conceptions of modesty came along later with more highly civilized conditions.

With the doming of many garments to show rank there also grew up the idea of adapting the garment to the materials readily available. The Turkman, for instance, probably likes his tall, shaggy sheepskin akalo, but he also wears this variety of hat because it is one which the great plains of Russian Central Asia easily afford.

"Current history nearly always has influenced the ornamentation of the body or of the costume, as typified by the sphinx-caps worn by the later Egyptians and the Tutankhamen and mah-jong dresses in vogue within the last year or two.

"From a scientific standpoint, however, clothing and ornamentation of the body were the same in the beginning, and though climate, during civilized times, has had a marked influence on determining the weight and warmth of the clothing worn in various localities, we have one marked example to-day of the fact that climate and geography were not the determining factors in the evolution of dress. The Arabs, who live within or in the immediate vicinity of the Torrid Zone, swath themselves in heavy flowing garments while the inhabitants of Tierra del Fuego, where the climate is cold, rainy and disagreeable, attach by cords across their bodies the skin of one animal which they shift from one side to the other with the direction of the wind.

"Complained of Too Many Clothes. In the early days when a quantity of clothes meant rank and style,

(Copyright John F. Dille Co.)

The desire to keep up with the Jones probably led some individuals to wear so many garments that they were weakening and deteriorating, for Croesus, who was the Rockefeller of his day, dissipated at length on the vice which was overtaking some of his acquaintances in a letter to his friend Cyrus the Great, of Persia.

"One student of costumes of all ages has cleverly divided the development of clothing into two classes—the tropical, based on the girdle, and the Arctic, based on the trouser, but even these divisions have their complexities, for the trouser may have been a downward development of the waistband. The Greek and Romans got a 'kick' out of the fact that the northern barbarians against whom they fought wore trousers. It immediately became a new item which they added to their fashion notes.

Where Women Wear Trousers. "But the girly-trouser chafardition has some other confusing points—both the men and women wore them. This is still explicated in the Eskimo and Chinese trousered woman of to-day.

"As countries developed and their boundary lines became fixed, the national character of the people got busy on their costumes, and we find the Spaniard with a stiff ruff about his neck and broad wings on his doublet, the German with bizarre slashings on his coat and sleeves, the Dutchman in somber black, and the Venetian in long flowing garments. Out of such human frailties and follies, mixed with national pride spiced with climate, and steamed with the indignation of modern modistes, were cooked up the varied and picturesque costumes of the world to-day.

"And even the men of America, who profess to dress comfortably to suit the weather, still show one lingering trace of the age old heedlessness of climate. Though the sun is shining down with its sometime autumnal relentlessness and the good straw hat which has served faithfully is still in its prime, September 15 is Felt Hat Day. The Japanese men are just as bad. Summer comes in Japan on June 1, and on that day regardless of the temperature the Tokyo policeman bursts forth in all the glory of white coat and hat.

"The Viach, of the Balkans, also shows a similar disregard for climate in another way. In January, February, June and July, he wears his heavy homespun garments, nor does he discard them at night. He shuts his windows to keep out the 'dangerous' night air and rolls himself, clothes and all, in heavy blankets and sleeps. But he manifests a contrariness probably unexcelled by men of any other clime. When caught away from home, this same salamander will sleep in the open on the side of one of his loved mountains with only a rug to cover him."

Fugitive Burglar is Caught in Minnesota

Morrison—Frank Edwards, who escaped from the Joliet penitentiary seven or eight weeks ago, was captured at Winona, Minn., and returned to the prison on last week Saturday, according to word received in this city. Edwards was sent to Joliet from Morrison, being convicted of burglarizing the R. L. Burchell store at Erie, and was the ring leader in the jail delivery at the time he assaulted H. T. Berry, who was then a deputy sheriff. Edwards has a long criminal record, and has often boasted that he could get out of any jail. He has always been re-captured, however, and in the present instance will serve out his full term at Joliet.

Davis' Vacation Ended: He's Returning to Work

Aboard Bar Harbor Express, en route for New York, July 31—Getting back to his personal headquarters in New York today, John W. Davis, democratic party standard bearer, will devote himself almost exclusively during the next ten days to the perfection of campaign organization and plans. He will then go to Clarksburg, W. Va., to formally begin his fight with the delivery of his acceptance speech.

His first conference today will be with his campaign manager, C. L. Shaver, who will report on the progress made in perfecting the campaign machinery. The candidate then will confer with Daniel C. Roper of North Carolina and later will meet Walker D. Hines of New York.

While passing through Maine last night, Mr. Davis delivered two addresses but with only passing reference to politics.

The Fable of the Other Pasture

Aesop will tell you in a story hundreds of years old of the lure of the other pasture; how the grass always looks greener there; grows in more luxuriant fashion.

But Aesop also pointed out a lesson for those who seek other pastures when just as green, just as luscious grass grows in their own pasture.

There are no "greener pastures" than those of your home town merchants; they're Dixon men and women who know the needs of Dixon people.

They give you more for your money than anyone else. You know them, say "hello" when you pass then on the street, have confidence in them. You know the quality of their goods as well.

When you buy in Dixon you help yourself as well as the merchant; help give Dixon better schools, better streets, help make it a better city in every way.
